GRAND JURY REPORT DEMANDS REMOVAL OF BOARD MEMBERS

Brown Undecided On Action; Davey Attacks Maschke

CLEVELAND, Oct. 27.—Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown will seek a conference with Attorney General Edward C. Turner here, before taking action on the special grand jury's report demanding removal of all but one member of the Cuyahoga County board of elections, on charges of non-feasance in the conduct of the Aug. 14 primary.

The report, which came out of a blue sky, stirred Cleveland politics into excitement, demands the ousting of the entire board and all its employees, except Mrs. Bernice S. Pyke, newly appointed Democratic member.

The board of elections members whose removal was demanded were to meet for an "informal conference" today at the office of Harry L. French, president of the board.

French said a copy of the grand jury report would be perused at the meeting, and action by the board discussed.

Under the state law, Brown, as official head of the state election machinery, has the sole power to act upon the jury's recommendation.

Three courses, the secretary of state indicated, are open to him. First: He can remove the board summarily, as the law empowers him to do, and name a new board before election day, as the jury demands.

Second: He can permit the old board to remain in nominal charge and send inspectors or assistant secretaries of state to Cleveland to represent his office in an oversight of the elections.

Third: He can delay action while he conducts personal investigation. Brown said he would make his decision after studying the report at his home in Blanchester over the week end, and after a trip to Cleveland to seek Turner's advice.

Attorney General Turner prepared to continue analysis of unrepresented evidence, until the recessed jury convenes again November 5.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 27.—Congressman Martin I. Davey, Democratic nominee for governor, assailed the Cuyahoga County Republican organization in a telegram sent to Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown today.

The telegram was based on findings of the Cuyahoga County grand jury which, after investigating alleged election frauds here, returned a special report recommending ousting of all except one member of the board of elections.

"More important than everything else in this election, be it said," Davey wired, "is to protect the public from those shameful and repeated election frauds which poison the system of government at its source."

"Maurice Maschke (Republican national committeeman) and his associates must be driven from power and every guilty man sent to the penitentiary."

Davey and Maschke have been at bitter odds since Maschke openly declared that Davey "was the fair-haired pet of the Ku Klux Klan." Davey subsequently charged Maschke with "fostering corrupt government."

Blehler, Coshocton; directors, J. Britton, Miamisburg; Charles Herman, Coshocton; Gregory Schott, Canton; and Clarence F. Blakeman, Tiffin. The next convention city will be selected by the directors.

WOMAN KILLED BY TRAIN

MRS. R.S. GRAHAM IS CROSSING VICTIM; HUSBAND IS INJURED

Mrs. R. S. Graham, about 38, Bellbrook Ave., was instantly killed, her husband was perhaps fatally injured and their three children escaped serious injury when a Baltimore and Ohio electric train struck their automobile at the Bellbrook Ave. crossing at 2:30 p. m. Saturday.

Mrs. Graham was decapitated and her body was extricated from beneath the train.

At McClellan Hospital, where the father and three children were removed after the crash, physicians had not determined the extent of Graham's injuries early Saturday afternoon. He partly regained consciousness shortly after being received at the hospital.

The youngest child, also found underneath the locomotive, was found to have sustained only a cut on the head. The other children, a boy and girl, received lesser injuries.

Graham was driving the car in which they were traveling north.

GOVERNOR BIDDING FOR PENNSYLVANIA WITH STRONG HOPES

Great Demonstration
Promised; Will Speak
On Radio

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Gov. Alfred E. Smith donned his brown derby today to carry his presidential campaign into the heart of Pennsylvania, a strong Republican state.

Electoral votes have been counted there for fifty years and not a single Democratic candidate has received one of them, but Smith's managers and local Pennsylvania leaders have told him that this year he has the chance to do what Democrats before always have considered impossible.

Democratic leaders of Camden and Philadelphia have warned him to expect another demonstration like the wild ones he received in Boston, Providence and Hartford.

The governor spent this morning polishing up the speech he is to deliver over a national radio network from Philadelphia tonight, starting at 8 p. m. E. S. T. It is said to be another broadside against the personal campaign of his Republican opponent Herbert Hoover and the leaders associated with Hoover.

The Philadelphia trip takes the governor into the final stage of his presidential fight. Before he will visit Baltimore for a parade and speech Monday, the swift thrust at Pennsylvania and Maryland because of favorable reports from the former state and some unfavorable indications from the latter.

The anti-prohibition element is reported strong in the industrial centers of Pennsylvania, and according to Democratic sources the Republican party has not fully recovered from the old Vire-Mellon fight.

Pennsylvania is the second strongest electoral state, with thirty-eight votes compared to New York's forty-five. The Republican majority there in the 1924 national election was 929,259.

The state this year has more than 5,000,000 persons male and female over 21 years of age and eligible to register for voting.

But the Democrats have never carried this state. Its only disaffection from the Republican party was in 1912 when Theodore Roosevelt, running as an independent, carried the state.

The situation in Maryland has been complicated, Democrats here say, because of straw votes indicating Republicans had a better chance to carry it than the Democrats had thought possible. From the first they have considered Maryland safe because of anti-prohibition sentiment there and the fact that the Democrats carried it in 1924. They expect Smith's visit to make it safe.

AKRON, O., Oct. 27.—David Mayer, 65, died in a barber shop here while awaiting his turn in a chair. When Mayer failed to respond to the barber's call of "next," it was discovered he was dead.

REPUBLICANS WILL UNDERTAKE APPEAL FOR FARMER VOTES

Borah Sponsoring Action
By Congress On Farm
Relief

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Herbert Hoover and his advisers decided today to make a vigorous appeal for the farm vote, which they think may decide the election.

This took the form of a movement for a special session of congress to take up farm relief legislation, sponsored by Senator Borah of Idaho with the approval of Hoover.

After a conference with Hoover, the Idaho senator issued a statement urging a special session, unless some action is taken at the coming short session, which he said should pass measures:

1. Increasing tariff duties upon farm products.
2. Establishing a more satisfactory marketing system "so as to enable the farmers to market their products without the enormous expense which is now necessarily incurred."
3. Setting up a federal farm board.

"As I see it, we ought to have better protection for the farmer's products, we ought to have a better marketing system and we ought to have a farm board with authority and with funds to cooperate in disposing of his surplus," Borah said.

The program Borah outlined embodies Hoover's farm relief proposals. A statement from his headquarters recently said a special session had been considered, but no conclusion reached.

The movement was left to Borah, the chief "stump" speaker for Hoover. The Idaho senator returned here yesterday from his southern tour and immediately made plans for a final tour. He will return to the south for a speech at Asheville, N. C. next Monday or Tuesday, and then will pick up Governor Alfred E. Smith's trail in the east, closing week speaking at Baltimore, Boston, and Utica, New York. He did not announce the dates of these engagements.

Hoover, himself, will make his final campaign appeal for the farm vote in his St. Louis speech Nov. 2, which will be broadcast over a national radio hook-up.

Borah, who has been almost as prominent a figure in the campaign as the candidates themselves, was questioned soon after his return here by the reporters representing Democratic newspapers, who claimed his support of Hoover is "inconsistent" with his "progressive" stand upon issues in the senate.

He explained he was supporting Hoover chiefly because of the Republican candidate's prohibition stand.

DEATH TOLL OF WRECK NOW 60

LONDON, Oct. 27.—The latest death toll in the wreck of two passenger trains at Recea, Rumania, yesterday was placed at sixty today in a dispatch to the Daily News from Vienna.

The newspaper said forty-seven persons were seriously injured. Twenty-seven of the dead have been identified as Rumanians.

BUCHAREST, RUMANIA, Oct. 27.—All employees of the Recea railway station were under arrest today in connection with the train wreck there yesterday.

Reports gathered from passengers on the fast Simplon Orientale express when it ran through an open switch and crashed into another passenger train, apparently established the fact that there were no employees at the station at the time of the wreck.

FIREBUGS SOUGHT FOR FIRING CHURCH

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 27.—Incendiaries who attempted to fire the First Congregational Church here shortly after midnight, were the object of an intensive police search today.

The fire was the second started in the church in three weeks. On October 13, the first attempt to destroy the old edifice was made and incendiaries were blamed. Some time last night the vandals ascended to the third floor of the church by means of a ladder, piled up cornstalks and other inflammables intended for Halloween decorations, and ignited them.

The fire was discovered almost immediately and firemen extinguished it before much damage was done. A hole six feet in diameter was burned through the floor.

TAPS!

JOHN R. McQUIGG

GENERAL McQUIGG, FORMER COMMANDER OF LEGION, IS DEAD

Had Long Military And Law Career; Hunted
Villa

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 27.—Brig. Gen. John R. McQuigg, former national commander of the American Legion, died last night at his home in East Cleveland.

He had been ill for more than a year. His condition became critical early this week.

His wife, son Donald and daughter Pauline, were at the bedside. As a colonel "Go Get 'Em" McQuigg led the 12th Engineers, 37th Division to France during the World War. Prior to that he had been on the border hunting the notorious Mexican bandit, Villa.

He was made a brigadier general in command of the 73rd Infantry Brigade, Ohio National Guard, by Gov. Harry L. Davis upon his discharge from the regular army at the end of the World War.

John R. McQuigg was born at Wooster, Dec. 5, 1865. He attended Wooster College, Cornell University and the National Law School at Washington.

After his graduation from law school he came to Cleveland to hang out his shingle. His military career started when he joined the Cleveland Grays on July 18, 1892. Four years later he was made a sergeant.

When war with Spain was declared, he organized the grays into three companies which became parts of the Tenth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and he was made captain of a company, but he failed to get to Cuba.

Upon his return here, he organized a battalion which became the 12th engineers, and it was as colonel of that outfit that he went to Mexico. When the United States entered the World War McQuigg was commissioned as a colonel in the regular army, and won his chance to go overseas.

Despite his military activities, he had not neglected his law practice.

At the time of his death he was a member of the law firm of Riley and McQuigg, and he was president and general counsel for the Windermere Savings & Loan Co.

It was in 1925 that he was chosen national commander of the American Legion. His efforts on behalf of ex-servicemen carried him on speaking tours of the entire country and made his name nationally known.

He had served three terms as mayor of East Cleveland.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed today but it was expected that burial would be made here, with members of the American Legion here performing the military ritual at the grave.

BRIDE, GROOM RAIL VICTIMS

ST. PARIS, O., Oct. 27.—Ronald Beatty, 24, and his bride of three months, Dorothy, 18, were killed here last night when their automobile was struck by a Pennsylvania passenger train.

Young Beatty's view was obstructed by a standing freight train and apparently he did not see the speeding passenger train. His body was thrown clear of the wreckage and his wife's was carried on the pilot of the locomotive until the train was stopped.

GRAF ZEPPELIN MAY START HOME FLIGHT MONDAY IS LEARNED

Start Depends On Weather; Coming Back
In Month

LAKEHURST, N. J., Oct. 27.—The trans-Atlantic dirigible Graf Zeppelin was being groomed today for her east-bound flight to Friederichshafen, Germany.

Following the announcement by Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the airship, that the proposed mid-western flight of the Zeppelin was cancelled, workmen busied themselves about the giant airliner to have her in readiness for a take-off Monday, if weather conditions permit.

Dr. Eckener, Ernst A. Lehman, second in command, and other officers of the ship were in New York at a hotel where they planned to stay until Sunday noon. Hans Schiller, navigating officer, was left in command of the dirigible as ranking officer on board, here.

Von Schiller said the return air voyage to Germany would be made by way of the great circle course. If the airship cruises with the anticipated favorable tail-wind pushing her she should reach the home hangar fifty or sixty hours after leaving here. Von Schiller said:

"With a favorable wind, we can make nearly ninety miles an hour for most of the way," Von Schiller added. "We hope of course that we will not have any such bad luck."

"The next trip to America probably will be made a month or so after we land in Germany. We have to be back in Berlin for the aeronautic reception planned there. We had been asked to be there by October 27 (today)."

Dr. Eckener, in announcing the necessity of abandoning the mid-western flight of the Graf Zeppelin, was extremely regretful that he had been unable to show the great dirigible to the people in that area.

His statement said:

"The primary object of the flight of the Graf Zeppelin to America has been to give a demonstration that modern rigid airships can be operated across the north Atlantic, and on other ocean passages with safety and reliability."

"We are preparing to show that repeated Atlantic crossings can be made at short intervals and to that end I prefer not to prolong my stay in this hospitable country for more than two weeks at the present time."

HOOVER FOUGHT TO FEED THE GERMANS

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 27.—Herbert Hoover fought almost single-handed to feed the German people immediately after the World War.

Alanson B. Houghton, post war ambassador to Germany and now candidate for United States senator from New York, said in an address here last night.

"I have received many letters asking if Hoover was hostile to efforts made to send food to Germany after the war," Houghton said.

"I know this—that the greatest single human force to get food into Germany and break that blockade was Herbert Hoover. It is not too much to say that he fought almost single handed."

"When he finally got food in he put it into the hands of friends of the Republic, not into the hands of those attempting to restore military autocracy."

REPORT WISCONSIN FOOTBALL PLAYERS HURT IN TRAIN WRECK

HELMER, Ind., Oct. 27.—The train carrying the University of Wisconsin football team to Ann Arbor, Mich., was wrecked in a rear end collision with a freight train near here today.

Unconfirmed reports received here said several members of the Wisconsin team were injured.

The engine of the passenger train was overturned and fire broke out in the wreckage of the caboose of the freight train, reports said.

It was believed several of the reported injured were members of the train crew who were riding in the caboose.

A wrecking crew from Montpelier, Ind., was summoned to clear the track of the wreckage.

It was believed the passenger train might be able to resume its journey after the track was cleared.

NOMINEE ADDRESSES 10,000 REPUBLICANS AT CLIFTON MEETING

Attacks Democratic Arguments and Predicts Hoover
Victory; Cooper Outlines Campaign Promises.

Democratic arguments that the farmer is being ignored under the Republican administration were attacked by Senator Charles E. Curtis, Kansas, Republican vice-presidential nominee, in an address on farm relief at a Seventh District Republican rally at Clifton Friday afternoon.

Making his only address in this section of Ohio in a large chautauqua tent packed with farmers and Republican supporters who desired to hear how their problems might be dealt with by the Republican party, Senator Curtis showed that twenty-six farm relief bills were passed shortly after the termination of Woodrow Wilson's administration.

The Democratic contention that a tariff wall is of little help to wheat growers because of the surplus crops produced in this country drew fire from the speaker.

It is estimated that more than 10,000 people from every section of the state heard the political addresses. A microphone and amplifiers which had been installed made it possible for the crowd outside the tent to hear the speakers.

The rally was held under the joint auspices of the Greene and Clark County Republican Executive Committees and State Senator L. T. Marshall, Xenia, chairman of the local executive committee, had charge of arrangements.

At the invitation of Senator Curtis, Senator S. D. Fess, Arthur Nixon, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, and C. L. Darlington and Paul H. Crosswell, Xenia, as representatives of the Ohio Republican Service League, accompanied the vice-presidential nominee from Columbus to Cedarville in the candidate's private car. The party was then escorted to Clifton.

"We promise to put agriculture on an equal basis with other industries in the United States," Senator Curtis said in discussing the farm relief problem.

In discussing the Democratic attitude on the tariff situation, Curtis declared, "Not one farmer has ever benefited by competitive tariff. We Republicans believe in a protective tariff which gives American producers protection over foreign producers. The wool we use in this country should be produced from the backs of American sheep."

Senator Curtis quoted Gov. Smith as saying that he (Smith) knew that wheat had often been over-produced but that excess crops could be controlled through the banks. Further saying that, Smith said when the farmers get down off the mountain top and paid more attention to economics, they could help themselves.

"Smith committed himself to the Underwood bill in his acceptance speech, but since that time 'as disclaimed himself,' Curtis stated. "Sen. Curtis, in answering a charge made by Smith in his Omaha speech in which he accused the Republican party of violating the agriculture problem to American farmers, had deceived them, and had done nothing to relieve the distress or promote welfare for the farmers during seven and one-half years of promise and no performance, said. "In 1918 the farmers asked for an emergency tariff. A Republican house introduced and passed such an emergency tariff but President Wilson vetoed it. Later, thousands of farmers filed applications for loans on their farms which was refused because the Farm Loan Board had no money."

Senator Curtis' decision to make only a brief talk and to permit the other speakers to take up the hour on the radio which he had reserved may be changed when he confers with Maschke.

In all probability Maschke will insist that the candidate speak for as much of the reserved hour—between 1 and 2 p. m.—as he can, as the club has announced it will put its program from Hotel Holloman on the radio over Station WHK.

NEW DIRECTORS FOR COMMERCE CHAMBER

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 27.—The Ohio Chamber of Commerce, meeting here, elected ten new directors as follows:

Mark W. Shelby, Portsmouth; E. S. Nall, Mansfield; A. J. Bennett, Cambridge; George Decamp, Cleveland; George J. Arnold, Cleveland; L. C. Sabin, Cleveland; Dr. F. C. Hicks, Cincinnati; Homer H. McKeehan, Cleveland; and J. J. Bennett, Cleveland.

A. S. Rodgers, Cleveland, was elected an adviser.

SENATOR NORRIS TO GIVE SMITH SPEECH AT OMAHA MEETING

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 27.—Senator George W. Norris was here today prepared to deliver his first speech in behalf of Gov. Alfred E. Smith tonight in the municipal auditorium.

He has just completed a campaign for progressive senators in Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana and Washington. Two of the men he supported are Democrats, two are Republicans and one a Farm-Laborite.

Senator Norris enumerated his reasons why he favored Smith. Gov. Smith's stand on water power, farm relief and the Niagara matter won him to the Democratic cause, Norris said.

"We are in Nicaragua without law or justice,"

In regard to prohibition Norris said:

"The first steps to make prohibition effective is to take enforcement of it out of politics. It is to be enforced by unscrupulous politicians who demand to say who shall be appointed to enforce the law. Some of these politicians, I am told, are in league with bootleggers. Others are using the power to strengthen themselves politically."

GRAND JURY REPORT DEMANDS REMOVAL OF BOARD MEMBERS

Brown Undecided On Action; Davey Attacks Maschke

CLEVELAND, Oct. 27.—Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown will seek a conference with Attorney General Edward C. Turner here, before taking action on the special grand jury's report demanding removal of all but one member of the Cuyahoga County board of elections, on charges of non-feasance in the conduct of the Aug. 14 primary.

The report, which came out of a blue sky, stirred Cleveland politics into excitement, demands the ousting of the entire board and all its employees, except Mrs. Bernice S. Pyke, newly appointed Democratic member.

The board of elections members whose removal was demanded were to meet for an "informal conference" today at the office of Harry L. French, president of the board.

French said a copy of the grand jury report would be perused at the meeting, and action by the board discussed.

Under the state law, Brown, as official head of the state's election machinery, has the sole power to act upon the jury's recommendation.

Three courses, the secretary of state indicated, are open to him. First: He can remove the board summarily, as the law empowers him to do, and name a new board before election day, as the jury demands.

Second: He can permit the old board to remain in nominal charge and send inspectors or assistant secretaries of state to Cleveland to represent his office in an oversight of the elections.

Third: He can delay action while he conducts personal investigation.

Brown said he would make his decision after studying the report at his home in Blaine, after the week end, and after a trip to Cleveland to seek Turner's advice.

Attorney General Turner prepared to continue analysis of unrepresented evidence, until the recessed jury convenes again November 5.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 27.—Congressman Martin L. Davey, Democratic nominee for governor, assailed the Cuyahoga County Republican organization in a telegram sent to Secretary of State Clarence J. Brown today.

The telegram was based on findings of the Cuyahoga County grand jury which, after investigating alleged election frauds here, recommended ousting of all except one member of the board of elections.

"More important than everything else in this action, be it said," Davey wired, "is to protect the public from those shameful and repeated election frauds which poison the system of government at its source."

Davey and Maschke have been at bitter odds since Maschke openly declared that Davey "was the fair-haired pet of the Ku Klux Klan." Davey subsequently charged Maschke with "fostering corrupt government."

Myers V. Cooper, Republican candidate for governor, was in Wooster when he was apprised of the grand jury's report.

"This is surely a surprise," the nominee told the United Press. "No," he said in response to a question, "I would not care to make any comment until I see a copy of the grand jury report."

"Then I shall make a statement on the affair."

John R. McQuigg was born at Wooster, Dec. 5, 1866. He attended Wooster College, Cornell University and the National Law School at Washington.

After his graduation from law school he came to Cleveland to hang out his shingle. His military career started when he joined the Cleveland Grays on July 18, 1892. Four years later he was made a sergeant.

When war with Spain was declared, he organized the grays into three companies, which became parts of the Tenth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and he was made captain of a company, but he failed to get to Cuba.

Upon his return here, he organized a battalion which became the 112th engineers, and it was as colonel of that outfit that he went to Mexico. When the United States entered the World War McQuigg was commissioned as a colonel in the regular army, and won his chance to go overseas.

Despite his military activities, he had not neglected his law practice.

At the time of his death he was a member of the law firm of Riley and McQuigg, and he was president and general counsel for the Windermere Savings & Loan Co.

It was in 1925 that he was chosen national commander of the American Legion. His efforts on behalf of ex-service men carried him on speaking tours of the entire country and made his name nationally known.

He had served three terms as mayor of East Cleveland.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed today but it was expected that burial would be made here, with members of the American Legion here performing the military ritual at the grave.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 27.—Incendiaries who attempted to fire the First Congregational Church here shortly after midnight, were the object of an intensive police search today.

The fire was the second started in the church in three weeks. On October 13, the first attempt to destroy the old edifice was made and incendiaries were blamed.

Some time last night the vandals ascended to the third floor of the church by means of a ladder, piled up cornstalks and other inflammables intended for Halloween decorations, and ignited them.

The fire was discovered almost immediately and firemen extinguished it before much damage was done. A hole six feet in diameter was burned through the floor.

ST. PARIS, O., Oct. 27.—Ronald Beatty, 24, and his bride of three months, Dorothy, 18, were killed here last night when their automobile was struck by a Pennsylvania passenger train.

Young Beatty's view was obstructed by a standing freight train and apparently he did not see the speeding passenger train. His body was thrown clear of the wreckage and his wife was carried on the pilot of the locomotive and the train was stopped.

GRAF ZEPPELIN MAY START HOME FLIGHT MONDAY IS LEARNED

Start Depends On Weather; Coming Back In Month

LAKEHURST, N. J., Oct. 27.—The trans-Atlantic dirigible Graf Zeppelin was being groomed today for her east-bound flight to Friedrichshafen, Germany.

Following the announcement by Dr. Hugo Eckener, commander of the airship, that the proposed mid-western flight of the Zeppelin was cancelled, workmen busied themselves about the giant airliner to have her in readiness for a take-off Monday, if weather conditions permit.

Dr. Eckener, Ernst A. Lehman, second in command, and other officers of the ship were in New York at a hotel where they planned to stay until Sunday noon. Hans Von Schiller, navigating officer, was left in command of the dirigible as ranking officer on board, here.

Von Schiller said the return air voyage to Germany would be made by way of the great circle course, if the airship cruises with the anticipated favorable tail-wind pushing her she should reach the home hangar fifty or sixty hours after leaving here. Von Schiller said:

"With a favorable wind, we can make nearly ninety miles an hour for most of the way," Von Schiller added. "We hope of course that we will not have any such bad luck as we had coming over."

The next trip to America probably will be made a month or so after we land in Germany. We have to be back in Berlin for the aeronautic reception planned there. We had been asked to be there by October 27 (today).

Dr. Eckener, in announcing the necessity of abandoning the mid-western flight of the Graf Zeppelin, was extremely regretful that he had been unable to show the great dirigible to the people in that area.

His statement said:—"The primary object of the flight of the Graf Zeppelin to America has been to give a demonstration that modern rigid airships can be operated across the North Atlantic, and on other oceanic passages with safety and reliability."

"We are preparing to show that repeated Atlantic crossings can be made at short intervals and to that end I prefer not to prolong my stay in this hospitable country for more than two weeks at the present time."

HOOPER FOUGHT TO FEED THE GERMANS

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 27.—Herbert Hoover fought almost single-handed to feed the German people immediately after the World War. Ambassador to Germany and now candidate for United States senator from New York, said in an address here last night.

"I have received many letters asking if Hoover was hostile to efforts made to send food into Germany after the war," Houghton said.

"I know this—that the greatest single human force to get food into Germany and break that blockade was Herbert Hoover. It is not too much to say that he fought almost single handed."

"When he finally got food in he put it into the hands of friends of the Republic, not into the hands of those attempting to restore military autocracy."

A. S. Rodgers, Cleveland, was elected an adviser.

REPORT WISCONSIN FOOTBALL
PLAYERS HURT IN TRAIN WRECK

HELMER, Ind., Oct. 27.—The train carrying the University of Wisconsin football team to Ann Arbor, Mich., was wrecked in a rear end collision with a freight train near here today.

Unconfirmed reports received here said several members of the Wisconsin team were injured.

The engine of the passenger train might be able to resume its journey after the track was cleared.

It was believed several of the reported injured were members of the train crew who were riding in the caboose.

A wrecking crew from Montpelier, Ind., was summoned to clear the track of the wreck.

It was believed the passenger train might be able to resume its journey after the track was cleared.

NOMINEE ADDRESSES

10,000 REPUBLICANS AT CLIFTON MEETING

Attacks Democratic Arguments and Predicts Hoover Victory; Cooper Outlines Campaign Promises.

Democratic arguments that the farmer is being ignored under the Republican administration were attacked by Senator Charles E. Curtis, Kansas, Republican vice-presidential nominee, in an address on farm relief at a Seventh District Republican rally at Clifton Friday afternoon.

Making his only address in this section of Ohio in a large chautauqua tent packed with farmers and Republican supporters who desired to hear how their problems might be dealt with by the Republican party, Senator Curtis showed that twenty-six farm relief bills were passed shortly after the termination of Woodrow Wilson's administration.

The Democratic contention that a tariff wall is of little help to wheat growers because of the surplus crops produced in this country drew fire from the speaker.

It is estimated that more than 10,000 people from every section of the state heard the political addresses. A microphone and amplifiers which had been installed made it possible for the crowd outside the tent to hear the speakers.

The rally was held under the joint auspices of the Greene and Clark County Republican Executive Committees and State Senator L. T. Marshall, Xenia, chairman of the local executive committee, had charge of arrangements.

"We promise to put agriculture on an equal basis with other industries in the United States," Senator Curtis said in discussing the farm relief problem.

In discrediting the Democratic attitude on the tariff situation, Curtis declared, "Not one farmer has ever benefited by competitive tariff. We Republicans believe in a protective tariff which gives American producers protection over foreign producers. The wool we use in this country should be produced from the backs of American sheep."

Sen. Curtis quoted Gov. Smith as saying that he (Smith) knew that wheat had often been over-produced but that excess crops could be controlled through the banks. Further saying that, Smith said when the farmers get down off the mountain top and paid more attention to economics, they could help themselves.

"Smith committed himself to the Underwood bill in his acceptance speech, but since that time has disclaimed himself," Curtis stated.

Sen. Curtis, in answering a charge made by Smith in his Omaha speech in which he accused the Republican party of violating the agriculture problem to American farmers, had deceived them, and had done nothing to relieve the distress or promote welfare for the farmers during seven and one-half years of promise and no performance, said. "In 1918 the farmers asked for an emergency tariff. A Republican house introduced and passed such an emergency tariff but President Wilson vetoed it. Later, thousands of farmers filed applications for loans on their farms which was refused because the Farm Loan Board had no money."

AT OMAHA MEETING

Enumerates Reason For Support Of Governor.

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 27.—Senator George W. Norris was here today prepared to deliver his first speech in behalf of Gov. Alfred E. Smith tonight in the municipal auditorium.

He has just completed a campaign for progressive senators in Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana and Washington. Two of the men he supported are Democrats, two are Republicans and one a Farm-Laborite.

Senator Norris enumerated his reasons why he favored Smith.

Gov. Smith's stand on water power, farm relief and the Niagara matter won him the Democratic cause, Norris said.

"We are in Nicaragua without law or justice."

In regard to prohibition Norris said:

"The first steps to make prohibition effective is to take enforcement out of it out of politics. It is to be appointed to enforce the law. Some of these politicians, I am told are in league with bootleggers. Others are using the power to strengthen themselves politically."

GANGSTER KINGS MACHINE GUN NEST GETS HYMIE WEISS

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth of a series on Chicago's gangster kings, written for Central Press and The Gazette by Bonita Witt, star girl reporter. Another dispatch follows tomorrow.)

By BONITA WITT
Staff Writer for Central Press and Gazette

CHICAGO, Ill., Oct. 27.—On November 11, 1924, the day Dion O'Banion, king of the bootleggers, was shot down among the roses of his little flower shop just outside the crowded Loop, his most trusted lieutenant, Earl "Hymie" Weiss, took up the reins of underworld control, which had been held so firmly by his dead chief.

Just twenty-three months later to the day, Weiss was mowed down by machine gun bullets, outside the flower shop where O'Banion met his death. Patrick Murray, beer baron, also was killed, and three other companions of Weiss were wounded by the bullets, one of them Hymie's attorney.

Machine Gun Planted

A machine gun had been mounted in a neighboring house, and countless cigaret butts on the floor where the gun had stood testified to long hours of waiting for the moment when Weiss would arrive. Many of the bullets struck Holy Name cathedral nearby, nearly obliterating its inscription, "In the name of Jesus every knee should bow, those that are in Heaven and those on earth."

Police believe the shooting was in retaliation for the assault on Hawthorne Inn in Cicero. The inn was the headquarters and stronghold of "Scarface" Al Capone, or Al Brown, as he sometimes is known. Rival gangsters had invaded ed Cicero and raked the inn with machine gun fire. Revenge in the underworld is swift and certain.

Weiss' end came as he was ready to quit the "alky racket" and go to Europe. He was preparing to take the advice of one of his friends, who said to him: "Hymie, stop being a hoodlum and quit this business; go abroad."

Was Aiding Beer Baron
At the time of his death he was working to secure the freedom of "Polack Joe" Salts, another beer baron, who was standing trial for murder. He always had managed to keep on friendly terms with Salts, for he saw the wisdom of co-operating with Salts rather than antagonizing him.

And like those who had gone away before him, "Hymie" Weiss was laid away to rest in a silvered bronze coffin, with the floral tributes of gangland covering his grave. A gangster's life may be short in Chicago, but he always is sure of a splendid funeral.

PROFESSOR HORACE ENGLISH COMPARES PARTY CANDIDATES

Admiring Smith for his "progressiveness" as compared to Hoover's "extreme conservatism," Professor Horace B. English, Ohio psychologist, declared that there is little else to choose between the Republican and Democratic candidates for president in an address before the Antioch College student and faculty bodies Friday.

Although denying any doubt as to Hoover's integrity, Professor English asserted that the Republican nominee is incapable of holding the most important office in the country.

"Hoover, although definitely inclined toward the League of Nations and the World Court, has maintained silence in his campaign speeches," the speaker declared.

Discussing Hoover's associates, Professor English denounced Dr. Hubert Work as a "corruptionist who has renewed the lease of the Salt Creek oil lands to Harry Sinclair, king of grafters." English charged that although Mr. Hoover is "concerned with materialistic prosperity, his social vision is concerned mostly with the standardization of drug packages and minor details when the country is facing the greatest crisis in its existence."

"In Smith, I find a different type of man," the speaker said. "Although a master politician while Hoover is mastered by politics, Smith is a progressive, a liberal. His frankness is admired. While he has graduated from Tammany Hall, Hoover has just entered the classrooms at Tammany Hall. Smith at Albany permitted no Tammany taint to blight his administration. If I as a Socialist had to choose, I would much rather have Smith in the White House handling the country's Latin American and public utilities problem than silent and conservative Hoover."

AMERICA'S SWEETHEART SHOWS HER PARIS WARDROBE

Mary Pickford, America's sweetheart, wears clothes designed for her by famous Paris couturiers at her home in California, "Pickfair." For swimming pool or beach a pajama suit of orchid crepe de chine, left, with coat of black printed crepe in a pattern of pink roses and green leaves, with matching umbrella and combination bag and pneumatic pillow. It was designed for her by Jean Patou. The chic walking costume of black crepe de chine, center, with pleated ruffle on skirt, is a Jenny model, and was snapped on the cornice walk at Pickfair. For the golf links the same designer created the simple costume, right, consisting of beige kasha skirt and beige sweater embroidered in ruby red and gold thread.

FROSH PARADE IN SILKS

Discard Red Flannels And Rough Clubs But Lose To Sophs.

Antioch College's Division "B" students held their annual pajama parade Friday—but how things have changed.

No longer did the meek freshmen come out in red flannels and nighties as in days of yore. To the astonishment of the sophomores, fifty daintily clad freshmen tripped out of the dormitories in flashy colored silks and satins.

Gone also is the day when the frosh carried crudely-fashioned clubs, an essential part of the parade. Instead the sophs were further amazed to see the belligerent freshmen troop out, each tenderly clasping an artistic model of a paddle, impeccably carved.

Thus the freshmen emerged victorious after a bitter controversy with the sophomores for the freshmen had gotten their paddles made to order from saw-mills instead of whittling out clubs by hand.

The sophomores went into a huddle, or "crap-shooting formation" as Graham MacNamee would say. Then bedlam ensued as the wrathful sophs swooped down on the lower classmen.

The quiet village of Yellow Springs was thrown into an uproar as 100 men followed by fifty crows, raising less noise, invaded the peaceful town. Snake dances, leap frog, horse cheers. The constable even looked anxious.

The scene swerved to the opera house and from the balcony they were pelted with pies. The pretty pajamas were pretty no longer and each sophomore made the best possible use of the artistic paddles.

"It is vengeance," gloated William Lloyd, sophomore class president. "What they did was inexcusable."

"The rascals," grunted Warren Coolbaugh, freshmen president. "Wait until next year."

Their pajamas spoiled and every bone in their bodies aching, the freshmen limped back to their dormitories, a sadder but wiser group.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

THE MECK AND THE POOR—The meek shall increase their joy in the Lord, and the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel.—Isa. 29:19.

BLAME FOR DIVORCES

For every two husbands who were granted divorces in 1926, five wives were thus given releases from their husbands, according to the most recent census figures.

In many cases the petition for a divorce is not opposed, and the petitioner for the divorce makes out that the opposite party is a most undesirable person to live with. But if the opposite side was heard, the situation might look different. Probably in the majority of cases both parties are sick of the union and very likely both are at fault.

According to an address before the Colorado Federation of Women's clubs by Mrs. Casey, chairman of the education committee of that federation, the modern girl is falling down on her job as homemaker. She thinks girls are taking too little interest in preparing themselves to care for a home.

The girls crowd into the business offices, while housework is unpopular. They may like the business field because they meet more men there and think they stand a better chance of a successful marriage, which is perfectly natural. The activities of the home in the past have seemed to be women's most natural field of activity, though the time may come when most women will keep on in business positions after marriage, and have all domestic work done by restaurants and professional cleaners, a plan which would solve some problems.

THOSE STRAW VOTES

Of the 48 states now represented in the Literary Digest poll, Smith carries but four,—Georgia, Louisiana, South Carolina and Mississippi, giving him 43 electoral votes out of the total 531. If Smith wins the present election, then the Literary Digest poll is completely jinxed and has misplaced at least 223 electoral votes.

It has been charged that the Literary Digest poll is stuffed by the magazine's editors. The Digest editors, as it happens, are said to be strong for Al Smith, and drop a tear for every Hoover postcard returned.

More conservative and probably more accurate is the straw vote conducted by Editor and Publisher, trade magazine for newspaper men. This publication recently sent out a questionnaire to the executives of all American daily newspapers, asking them, not for their personal opinions, but for their best judgment as to how the states in which they lived would go.

Compiling the results received, Editor and Publisher announces,—for Smith, 126 electoral votes,—for Hoover, 387 electoral votes, and the states of New York, Missouri and Maryland doubtful.

Yet it is most significant that in every straw vote, all straws incline in the same direction.

The boy, who longs to go on Byrd's Antarctic expedition, will no doubt kick this winter because the bathtub water is too cold.

It is claimed that the politicians should study the science of government, but they say that handshaking is more valuable.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

PREPAREDNESS

Mussolini, Italian dictator, has laid down the course that Italy is to follow until 1930. He tells his associates what he is going to do. He doesn't ask them. So long as he lives the strong man of Italy he may succeed in his one-man rule. The wise manager, however, is always training a successor. He provides for the period when he is away or when he is dead. The test of Mussolini's ability, his organizing power, will come after he has passed on.

DELEGATING AUTHORITY

Mussolini is not the only man who should provide for carrying on the business. Any man in an executive position who cannot delegate authority, who cannot train up another man to do the job as well or better than he can, lacks real executive and organizing ability. The world does not need eccentric geniuses so much as it needs far-sighted, keen-minded organizing men who build up machines which will run without them. A great executive once said: "I never do a thing that another man in my organization can do just as well."

CHEAPER MARRIAGES

In China the Minister of the Interior has issued instructions declaring the parents of marriageable girls must not receive more than $150 from the man who proposes. In some cases the amount is to be even less. Heretofore it has been more. The result has been fewer marriages in China and more bachelors because of economic necessity. And to be a bachelor of 30 or 40 years of age in China is to be in disgrace.

Americans are different. No American would accept any rule about marriage. That's a matter on which he will accept no rules and little advice.

DIVERTED ENOUGH

An old proverb says the mind ought sometimes to be diverted in order that it may return the better to thinking. Not much argument in that for the average American. Most of our day is given over to be diverted rather than to thinking. There are few of us who couldn't at least do better work than we do if we gave more time to quiet and deliberate thinking and less to the kind of hustle and hurry which is mostly false motion.

ADVICE

A man is hopelessly egotistic who won't listen to advice—but he is worse than that if he takes advice without giving it a great deal of thought and turning it over many times in his mind.

The Diary of a New Yorker

By CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK — New Yorkers look up at the slightest provocation. When one Gothamite gazes skyward, several thousand follow suit. There is no individuality. For several days prior to and after the Zepplin's arrival Times Square and other so-called open spaces were congested with gaping upward, staring people.

A bomb dropped from above would have knocked out everybody's teeth.

It doesn't pay to put your little girl into a ballet in New York. Indeed, it doesn't, as Harry A. Schulman can testify.

Schulman, dance promoter and president of the National Stage Children's association, permitted somebody else's little girl, aged eight, to take part in a performance last spring. He now has been sentenced to thirty days in the workhouse for illegally permitting a minor to take part in a theatrical performance.

Too bad some of the regular producers aren't sent to jail for permitting some of the adults in their shows to perform. There can be some horrible acting on Broadway.

Eva Le Gallienne and her civic repertory company seem to have scored in a revival of Chekov's masterly play, "The Cherry Orchard." Nazimova returns from the movies and vaudeville to give a stirring performance of Madame Renevsky.

Eugene O'Neill's latest play listed for production is "Lazarus Laughed." November 11, at the Provincetown Playhouse, in Greenwich Village, scene of his early triumphs. The Theatre Guild hesitated a long time regarding him, but since has made up its mind.

For some years now, as I've walked along Fifth avenue at Forty-third street, I've stopped to observe one of the most unique window decorators in New York. This gentleman is an expert in arranging fish displays—live and dead—in an oyster house show window, to attract the elect. Some days there are lobster decorations, twining, dying lobsters; other days, the lobsters are the center of the display. But always somewhere, besides the lobsters, are happy goldfish, secure in their tanks—living among the dead.

To my surprise, one of the hotels in the Times Square district with an English name actually has English and Irish help. I was nearly overcome when I heard an elevator boy say he had "navy-thing" to eat since morning except "two biscuits and a bit of tea."

But the head porter, who would make two of the elevator boys, is brazenly Irish. He has contempt for the English management. Too much furniture in rooms! How can a body get trunks in? Wan chair is enough for anybody in any room—and more that I cannot quote.

Best Smith story: Landlord desired to force a tenant to move. Landlord is an ardent Smith man. Learned tenant has five votes for Smith. If he moves, votes are lost. Ousting delayed until after election.

Lady Drummond Hay, who came over in the Zep, spent little time being "welcomed" with the red and white confetti. Unrecognized, she sped to Fifth avenue to shop.

Kellygrams

By FRED C. KELLY

"I never made a really big success in business," E. A. Filene famous Boston merchant, once told me, "until I began to neglect my business. By neglecting business I was able to look about the world and get a broader view of business and, moreover, I gave my assistants and associates an opportunity to do many things far better than I had been doing them."

NICE GENTLEMEN

Meeting his pet enemy on Main street one day, Jim observed affably: "I was sayin' some good things about you to a man this mornin'." "You was?" "Ya'as, I said you had the best cattle an' sheep of any farmer I knowed. An' what was more, I said that pair of hosses of yours was the finest in Franklin county—worth at least $800." "Who'd you say it to?" queried the flattered foe. "The tax assessor."

NOT THEIR WORRY

In Ontario, Canada, the speed cops seem to have given it up as a bad job. The highway signs read: "Notice, pavement slippery in wet weather. Obey speed law." As much as to say, "In dry weather, disobey speed law and be hanged. We know you're going to, anyway."

RAINED OUT

A village bachelor who had finally succumbed to the charms of a willing widow did not appear on the date set for the wedding. The next day he came rather sheepishly to call on the well-known frantic bride-to-be.

"Why, Joe?" she exclaimed. "Why didn't you come yesterday afternoon?"

"We-e-e-l-l," he drawled, "I did aim to. But it just looked so much like rain."

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — Herbert Hoover knows a deal more about politics than he did a year ago—or considerably less than a year ago. In fact, he knows more about politics all the time.

Mr. Hoover has not, naturally, the political flair. Politics is not an instinct with him, as with Governor Smith. It is not even an instinct with the average small-town politician. There are plenty of ward heelers who intuitively grasp political meanings which Mr. Hoover has to master by hard work.

But he does master them by hard work. And it may be that that which is acquired by conscious effort is better understood by the man who has acquired it than the individual who acts on mere hunches understands what he is about.

Around last February or March, when some two score presidential candidates were in the public eye, Mr. Hoover's candidacy stood out in sharp contrast against all the rest—and not favorably, either, to his candidacy.

The other candidates, for the respective nominations, all seemed so sure of themselves—each one of himself, that is to say. They were in training already. There was no appearance of hurry or excitement about any of them. Their various groups of retainers were calm and serene. The work they were engaged in was no new thing to any of them.

At Hoover headquarters, in the Commerce building, there were signs of over-anxiety. Here was an outfit which was learning how— from Secretary Hoover all the way on down. It was a worried outfit—a scared outfit, too—afraid of its own job.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

During the summer you have probably gone in pretty strenuous for sports. If you have been at the beach, you have indulged in swimming until your muscles, long unused, have become firm and active. At the mountains, you have taken long hikes, crossed brooks and generally called into play all the muscles of your body. It has been wonderful exercise for you, and is much to be credited for your generally improved condition. Now that your vacation is over, determine not to go back to the old sedentary ways. Keep up your exercise. Don't get too much into the street car or the taxi habit. Walk all short distances, and remember while you are walking to breathe deeply and to stride along at a good brisk pace.

The average woman will never see that a poor complexion, wrinkles and general listlessness is often directly traceable to a lack of proper exercise, bad posture, and insufficiency of fresh air. It is nevertheless true that health and natural beauty is dependent upon proper circulation of the blood. Exercise may be divided into many different classes. There are exercises for developing or reducing or for maintaining the health and beauty of the body. Trunk bendings and twistings

The secretary, himself, just at the juncture when he ought to have been accessible, and confident and radiant, was mighty hard to get to. His attendants were perfectly free to admit that he was straining every nerve for the presidency, and on no account must be disturbed—whereas, of course, the proper play was that it was being forced on him much against his will.

Corrugated brows, the flush of fever, fretful words—these were the rule at Hoover headquarters then.

All this is changed now. It was so gradual that folk who have been seeing Mr. Hoover at fairly frequent intervals, right along have hardly realized that it was going on. However, thinking back to what the Republican candidate was early last spring, and seeing him as he is today, the alteration in him is startling.

He has learned politics. Between being born to politics, and learning it, there is a difference. Mr. Hoover has no inspirations, but he reasons things out, and his reasoning is sound.

His very manner has changed. He is not a back-slapper, but he "mixes" fairly well.

Congressman John Q. Tilson of Connecticut, Republican leader in the house of representatives, probably was the ex-secretary's ablest instructor. He tutored the latter intensively between the Kansas City convention and his pupil's acceptance speech.

Yet the student also deserves his need of praise. He certainly was not the typical bright boy. Evidently he was more the type of the faithful scholar who digs like all git-out and so often graduates at the head of his class.

MENU HINT

Cream of Cauliflower Soup
Chicken Pot Pie Creamed Onions
Baked Sweet Potatoes
Macaroni Pudding Coffee

What is wrong with this menu? I have given it to you to show you what is meant by an unbalanced meal. Cream soup, creamed onions, baked sweet potatoes, macaroni pudding, and bland in flavor, starchy and heavy. I am afraid few could keep awake after partaking of such a meal. What can we do with it?

Cream of Cauliflower Soup
Chicken Pot Pie with Onions
Crisp Cabbage, Cucumber and Tomato Salad
Macaroni Pudding Coffee
We don't need potatoes with pot pie and we'll cook the onions with the chicken. A lighter dessert could be used, fresh fruit would be ideal, but the macaroni pudding is permissible with the menu as revised.

Today's Recipes

Macaroni Pudding—Break four long sticks of macaroni into half-inch lengths. Boil a pint of milk, shake in the macaroni, and salt; boil it very slowly for half an hour. Thickly grease a pudding dish, and beat up an egg. Add two tablespoons of sugar to the macaroni, let it cool a little, then pour in the egg and mix well. Grate a little nutmeg on the top and bake the pudding very slowly until the top is a delicate brown.

Suggestion

To clean white woodwork easily and cheaply, dip a cloth in a little hot water, then wipe a little whitening over the surface. Next polish with the whitening on a dry cloth.

Butterscotch Sauce
(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe)

Put in top of double boiler one pound brown sugar, one-fourth pound (one-half cup) butter, and one-half pint heavy cream. Place over hot water over slow heat and cook one hour stirring occasionally. This sauce may be used over ice cream. Enough to serve six.

Stand erect, hands grasping the ends of a twelve-inch ruler or similar stick behind the back. Bend the knees and step backward over the ruler, one foot at a time. Do not lose your grasp on the stick. Straighten up and stretch arms and body upward. Now, lower your arms and step forward over the ruler. This exercise should be done several times a day to begin with, but as the muscles become more limber the number of successive repetitions should be increased to ten or twenty times.

No Excuse for Overweight Says Woman Who Reduced That Remarkable Reduction

You remember Mrs. M., whose remarkable reduction of 106 pounds we wrote about last week? I'll give you her letter in response to my request for some details.

Dear Doctor: I am very glad to answer your questions.

First: My father's family were slight during youth but all took on unusual weight in the thirties, which increased with time. My father usually weighed around 250 pounds. My mother's family were all slight. My mother never weighed more than 125 pounds. Now, at the age of 86, she weighs 86 pounds. She looks and is what one would consider normal in body and mind of a person of 50 years of age. She is very active and alert in both body and mind at this time.

Second: I am 64 inches tall and I weighed when I began dieting (August, 1926,) 256 pounds, and I weighed the following August, 1927, 150 pounds.

Third: I tried to walk very fast, at least two miles each day, and with the use of a victrola in my room did the daily dozen twice each day added the kicking exercises twice a day—with one hand on the end of my bed. A fast garch made the work seem play and how my hips did disappear!

Fourth: I followed as closely as possible your foundation diet.

Fifth: Yes, my food tastes have been entirely changed and for this reason I am sure I'll stay reduced. I used to like all of the fat-producing foods. I never cared for fruits or vegetables. Since I have reeducated my tastes I am perfectly satisfied and never miss any food with the exception of pie, and I eat a piece once in a while, but not regularly by any means. I find there is absolutely no excuse for excess weight in these days of ample information. I am never hungry and experience no longing for the things I should not have. I fear I have rather cultivated a disgust for those things that played such havoc with me.

Sixth: I weigh every day, so in case I gain a pound or two, I once may get rid of it. I certainly have much to thank you for: I am perfectly well, light on my feet—do not know what it means to be tired; have not had a cold since dieting and am constantly exposed to them; life is every particular is altogether brighter and better.

I believe within a generation I will be considered vulgar to be overweight. I trust that you may live long in the land and continue to bring relief and inspiration to countless people.

Thank you, Mrs. M. Two more questions. Did you have a continuous reduction or did you take rests? Are you keeping up your exercises now? You should.

Your answers have brought out some important points: 1st following the foundation diet so there is no malnutrition; 2nd exercise every day to keep reduced, to improve the health, and to keep from getting flabby; 3rd the cultivation of food tastes. The latter is of great importance, for one who is overweight must do that not only to reduce, but to stay reduced. Unless the food tastes are changed, the overweight will surely accumulate again.

What are your dietetic sins? Over-weighters? Bread? Candy? Rich desserts? Nuts? You wish you didn't care for them? You can have your wish. Swear off for, say at least two months. Take fruits for dessert and eat out every day to not over two slices a day, and less than that if you have other carbohydrate foods—potatoes, spaghetti, etc., and don't touch candy. Candy is probably the worst habit-forming food of all.

Our pamphlet on reducing and gaining weight will give you details.

Tomorrow: "Purring" Heart.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a young girl, 17 years old, and engaged. Do you think that I am too young to marry? Mother things so. I love this boy and think that he loves me, although we quarrel quite a bit. I'm sure you can answer this question, and I'm going to take your advice. What is the considered poor taste or judgment to be married in white organdie in October? USELESS."

Pretty young, dear. But your mother is the best judge of that. You would have to have her consent, you know. Some girls of 17 are much more mature than others, and seem to know their own minds. White organdie would be very pretty and appropriate.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am 18 years old and have been married six months to a man four years my senior. He goes autoing with a young man the same age and insists on having a good time, but compels me to stay at home and obey him. Do you think I should obey him when he does as he pleases? Do you think he should go autoing and leaving me home? Does it look suspicious to you of another girl, or does he do it for pleasure?"

BROKEN HEARTED? Your husband likes to get out with the fellows, I presume. Broken Hearted, and is thoughtless about leaving you. Why don't you get a bunch of girls together when he does that and have a good time, too? As to obeying him, if his mandates seem good to you, obey, especially if he asks you in a nice way. If they don't seem good to you, don't obey.

"LONELY LITTLE BROWN EYES."

It's a question in my mind, after reading your letter, whether you were really unable to go to the station or were too spunky to go because he could not come after you. Which was it? He probably thought the latter, and how do you think he knows you love him when you refused to marry him and wouldn't go to the station? He probably and very naturally thinks you don't like him at all. Why don't you write to him and tell him you were sick that day and that you want him to write. Then if he doesn't answer you'll know he has probably lost interest.

others? I hope you have time to tell me.

"Where did Golden Collar go, and what adventures befell him? And did he ever again meet Red-Feather, the brother who was so jealous of him?"

"Cormorant's questions came so quickly that they rather took his new friend's breath away."

"Hey, hold on a minute!" cried that lady bird. "One at a time, if you please. Let's see, now. Golden Collar took the path to the left, didn't he? Of course, it was many, many years ago, but my grandmother told me that he flew for days and he flew for nights, and at last he came to a place where the grass was green and the air balmy, and where little lagoons dotted the lands."

"Here, decided Golden Collar, was the very place for him to settle down, if ever he was going to."

"So Golden Collar chose a hummock high and dry enough on which to build a home, and near enough to the pools so that every day and night he might wade knee deep in the water on a search for food. "Golden Collar always had liked frogs and mollusks for dinner, but here he could have plenty of fat grasshoppers for dessert. And when he discovered this nothing could have driven him from the land."

Next—"A Terrifying Attack."

The Old Crv Nagz—When I married you, my dear, I thought our future would be one sweet song."

Mrs. Nagz—So it would have been—if you had supplied a few more golden notes.

Mussolini is not the only man who should provide for carrying on the business. Any man in an executive position who cannot delegate authority, who cannot train up another man to do the job as well or better than he can, lacks real executive and organizing ability. The world does not need eccentric geniuses so much as it needs far-sighted, keen-minded organizing men who build up machines which will run without them. A great executive once said: "I never do a thing that another man in my organization can do just as well."

CHEAPER MARRIAGES

In China the Minister of the Interior has issued instructions declaring the parents of marriageable girls must not receive more than $150 from the man who proposes. In some cases the amount is to be even less. Heretofore it has been more. The result has been fewer marriages in China and more bachelors because of economic necessity. And to be a bachelor of 30 or 40 years of age in China is to be in disgrace.

Americans are different. No American would accept any rule about marriage. That's a matter on which he will accept no rules and little advice.

DIVERTED ENOUGH

An old proverb says the mind ought sometimes to be diverted in order that it may return the better to thinking. Not much argument in that for the average American. Most of our day is given over to be diverted rather than to thinking. There are few of us who couldn't at least do better work than we do if we gave more time to quiet and deliberate thinking and less to the kind of hustle and hurry which is mostly false motion.

ADVICE

A man is hopelessly egotistic who won't listen to advice—but he is worse than that if he takes advice without giving it a great deal of thought and turning it over many times in his mind.

The Diary
of a
New Yorker

By CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK — New Yorkers look up at the slightest provocation. When one Gothamite gazes skyward, several thousand follow suit. There is no inequality. For several days prior to and after the Zeppelin's arrival Times Square and other so-called open spaces were congested with gaping upward, staring people.

A bomb dropped from above would have knocked out everybody's teeth.

It doesn't pay to put your little girl into a ballet in New York. Indeed, it doesn't, as Harry A. Schulman can testify.

Schulman, dance promoter and president of the National Stage Children's association, permitted somebody else's little girl, aged eight, to take part in a performance last spring. He now has been sentenced to thirty days in the workhouse for illegally permitting a minor to take part in a theatrical performance.

Too bad some of the regular producers aren't sent to jail for permitting some of the adults in their shows to perform. There can be some horrible acting on Broadway.

Eva Le Gallienne and her civic repertory company seem to have scored in a revival of Cheeky's "The Cherry Orchard." Nazimova returns from the movies and vaudeville to give a stirring performance of Madame Renevsky.

Eugene O'Neill's latest play listed for production is "Lazarus Laughed." November 11, at the Provincetown Playhouse, in Greenwich Village, scene of his early triumphs. The Theatre Guild hesitated a long time regarding him, but since has made up for it.

For some years now, as I've walked along Fifth avenue at Forty-third street, I've stopped to observe one of the most unique window decorators in New York. This gentleman is an expert at arranging fish displays—live and dead—in an oyster house show window, to eat since the election. Some days there are lobster decorations, twining, dying lobsters; other days, the lobsters are the center of the display. But always somewhere, besides the lobsters, are happy goldfish, secure in their tanks—living among the dead.

To my surprise, one of the hotels in the Times Square district with an English name actually has English and Irish help. I was nearly overcome when I heard an elevator boy say he had "nawty" to eat since the election. I heard two biscuits and a bit of tea.

But the head porter, who would make two of the elevator boys, is braughly Irish. He has contempt for the English management. Too much furniture in rooms! How can a body get trunk in? Wan chair is enough for anybody in any room—and more that I cannot quote.

Best Smith story: Landlord desired to force a tenant to move. Landlord is an ardent Smith man. Learned tenant has five votes for Smith. If he moves, votes are lost. Ousting delayed until after election.

Lady Drummond Hay, who came over in the Zep, spent little time being welcomed with the remainder of the crowd. Unrecognized, she sped to Fifth avenue to shop.

Kellygrams

By FRED C. KELLY

"I never made a really big success in business," E. A. Filene famous Boston merchant, once told me, "until I began to neglect my business. By neglecting business I was able to look about the world and get a broader view of business and, moreover, I gave my assistants and associates an opportunity to do many things far better than I had been doing them."

NICE GENTLEMEN

Meeting his pet enemy on Main street one day, Jim observed affably: "I was saying" some good things about you to a man this morning." "You was?" "Yas," I said who had the best cattle an' sheep of all the best known. An' what was more, I said that pair of hosses o' yours was the finest in Franklin county—worth at least $800." "Who'd you say it to?" queried the flattered foe. "The tax assessor."

NOT THEIR WORRY

In Ontario, Canada, the speed cops seem to have given it up as a bad job. The highway signs read: "Notice, pavement slippery in wet weather. Obey speed law." As much as to say, "In dry weather, disobey speed law and be hanged. We know you're going to, anyway."

RAINED OUT

A village bachelor who had finally succumbed to the charms of a willing widow did not appear on the date set for the wedding. The next day he came rather sheepishly to call on the well-known bride-to-be.

"Why, Joe?" she exclaimed. "Why didn't you come yesterday afternoon?"

"We-e-e," he drawled, "I did aim to. But it just looked so much like rain."

Behind the Scenes in Washington

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — Herbert Hoover knows a deal more about politics than he did a year ago—or considerably less than a year ago. In fact, he knows more about politics all the time.

Mr. Hoover has not, naturally, the political flair. Politics is not an instinct with him, as with Governor Smith. It is not even an instinct with the average small-town politician. There are plenty of ward heelers who intuitively grasp political meanings which Mr. Hoover has to master by hard work.

But he does master them by hard work. And it may be that that which is acquired by conscious effort is better understood by the man who has acquired it than the individual who acts on mere hunches understands what he is about.

Around last February or March, when some two score presidential candidates were in the public eye, Mr. Hoover's candidacy stood out in sharp contrast against all the rest—and not favorably, either, to his candidacy.

The other candidates, for the respective nominations, all seemed so sure of themselves—each one of himself, that is to say. They did their stuff easily. There was no appearance of hurry or excitement about any of them. Their various groups of retainers were calm and serene. The work they were engaged in was no new thing to any of them.

At Hoover headquarters, in the Commerce building, there were signs of over-anxiety.

Here was an outfit which was learning how—from Secretary Hoover all the way on down. It was a worried outfit—a scared outfit, too—afraid of its own job.

The secretary, himself, just at the juncture when he ought to have been accessible—and confident and radiant, was mighty hard to get to. His attendants were perfectly free to admit that he was straining every nerve for the presidency, and on no account must be disturbed—whereas, of course, the proper play was that it was being forced on him much against his will.

Corrugated brows, the flush of fever, fretful words—these were the rule at Hoover headquarters then.

All this is changed now. It was so gradual that folk who have been seeing Mr. Hoover at fairly frequent intervals right along have hardly realized that it was going on. However, thinking back to what the Republican candidate was early last spring, and seeing him as he is today, the alteration in him is startling.

He has learned politics. Between being born to politics, and learning it, there is a difference. Mr. Hoover has no inspirations, but he reasons things out, and his reasoning is sound.

His very manner has changed. He is not a back-slapper, but he "mixes" fairly well.

Congressman John Q. Tilson of Connecticut, Republican leader in the house of representatives, probably was the ex-secretary's able instructor. He tutored the latter intensively between the Kansas City convention and his pupil's acceptance speech.

Yet the student also deserves his need of praise. He certainly was not the typical bright boy. Evidently he was more the type of the faithful scholar who digs like all get-out—and so often graduates at the head of his class.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

During the summer you have probably gone in pretty strenuously for sports. If you have been at the beach, you have indulged in swimming until your muscles, long unused, have become firm and active. At the mountains you have taken long hikes, crossed brooks and generally called into play all the muscles of your body. It has been wonderful exercise for you and is much to be credited for your generally improved condition. Now that your vacation is over, determine not to go back to the old sedentary ways. Keep up your exercise. Don't get too much into the street car or the taxi habit. Walk all short distances, and remember while you are walking to breathe deeply and to stride along at a good, brisk pace.

The average woman will never see that a poor complexion, wrinkles and general listlessness is often directly traceable to a lack of proper exercise, bad posture, and insufficiency of fresh air. It is nevertheless true that health and natural beauty is dependent upon proper circulation of the blood.

Exercise may be divided into many different classes. There are exercises for developing or reducing or for maintaining the health and beauty of the body. Trunk bendings, and twistings are of the type which provide the internal masses most necessary to the health. All of you who are engaged in sedentary occupations need this kind of exercise far more than you need muscle building calisthenics. Setting up exercises—which everyone needs—will bring all the principal muscles of your body into play.

Here are three splendid exercises for keeping the muscles flexible and useful. Stand erect with hands locked behind your head. Raise the left knee obliquely to the right, twist the trunk to the left and touch the trunk to the left and touch the right elbow with the left knee. This sounds difficult, but it is easy to anyone who is physically fit. Those who cannot do it now should learn to.

Stand beside a strong kitchen chair. Step up on it with your right foot. Rise on the right foot, holding the left foot clear of the chair. You are now standing on one foot on the chair. Bend your right knee slowly until your foot touches the floor. Slowly straighten the right knee until you are again standing on the right foot on the chair with the left foot unsupported. Repeat exercise with left foot on the chair. This is rather difficult for a stout person to do, but any one with a

Baked Sweet Potatoes

What is wrong with this menu? I have given it to you to show you what is meant by an unbalanced meal. Cream soup, creamed onions, baked sweet potatoes, macaroni pudding, all bland in flavor, starchy and heavy. I am afraid few could keep awake after partaking of such a meal. What can we do with it?

Cream of Cauliflower Soup
Chicken Pot Pie with Onions
Crisp Cabbage, Cucumber and Tomato Salad
Macaroni Pudding Coffee
We don't need potatoes with pot pie and we'll cook the onions with the chicken. A lighter dessert could be used, fresh fruit would be ideal, but the macaroni pudding is permissible with the menu as revised.

Today's Recipes
Macaroni Pudding—Break four long sticks of macaroni into half-inch lengths. Boil a pint of milk, shake in the macaroni, and salt; boil very slowly for half an hour. Thicken with a pudding dish, and beat up an egg. Add two tablespoons of sugar to the macaroni, let it cool a little, then pour in the egg and mix well. Grate a little nutmeg on the top and bake the pudding very slowly until the top is a delicate brown.

Suggestion
To clean white woodwork easily and cheaply, dip a cloth in a little hot water, then wipe a little whitening over the surface. Next polish with the whitening on a dry cloth.

Butterscotch Sauce
(Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe)
Put in top of double boiler one pound brown sugar, one-fourth pound (one-half cup) butter, and one-half pint heavy cream. Place over hot water, stirring occasionally. This sauce may be used over ice cream. Enough to serve six.

Stand erect, hands grasping the ends of a twelve-inch ruler or similar stick behind the back. Bend the knees and step backward over the ruler, one foot at a time. Do not lose your grasp on the stick. Straighten up and stretch arms and body upward. Now, lower your arms and step forward over the ruler. This exercise should be done several times a day to begin with, but as the muscles become more limber the number of successive repetitions should be increased to ten or twenty times.

No Excuse for Overweight
Says Woman Who Reduced
That Remarkable Reduction

You remember Mrs. M., whose remarkable reduction of 106 pounds we wrote about last week? I'll give you her letter in response to my request for some details.

Dear Doctor: I am very glad to answer your questions. First, my father's family were slight during youth but all took on unusual weight in the thirties, which increased with time. My father usually weighed around 250 pounds. My mother's family were all slight. My mother never weighed more than 125 pounds. Now, at the age of 86, she weighs 86 pounds. She looks and is what one would consider normal in body and mind of a person of 50 years of age. She is very active and alert in both body and mind at this time.

Second: I am 64 inches tall and I weighed when I began dieting (August, 1926,) 256 pounds, and I weighed the following August, 1927, 150 pounds.

Third: I tried to walk very fast, at least two miles each day, and with the use of a victrola in my room did the daily exercises twice a day—each day added the kicking exercises twice a day—with one hand on the end of my bed. A fast march made the work seem play and how my hips did disappear!

Fourth: I followed as closely as possible your foundation diet.

Fifth: Yes, my food tastes have entirely changed and for this reason I am sure I'll stay reduced. I used to like all of the fat-producing foods. I never cared for fruits or vegetables. Since I have recultivated my taste, I am perfectly satisfied and never miss any food with the exception of pie, and I eat a piece once in a while, but not regularly by any means. I find there is absolutely no excuse for excess weight in these days of ample information. I am never hungry and experience no longing for the things I should not have. I fear I have rather cultivated a disgust for those things that played such havoc with me. Sixth: I weigh every day, so I can gain a pound or two, I can once may get rid of it.

I certainly have much to thank you for: I am perfectly well, light on my feet—do not know what it means to be tired; have no cold since dieting and no constipation; my life is altogether brighter and better.

I believe within a generation I will live long in the land and continue to bring relief and inspiration to countless people. MRS. M.

Thank you, Mrs. M. Two more questions. Did you have a continuous reduction or did you take rests? Are you keeping up your exercises now? You should.

Your answers have brought out some important points: 1st following the foundation diet so there is no malnutrition; 2nd exercise every day to keep reduced, to improve the health, and to keep from getting flabby; 3rd the cultivation of food tastes. The latter is of great importance, for one who is overweight must do that not only to reduce, but to stay reduced. Unless the food tastes are changed, the overweight will surely accumulate again.

What are your dietetic sins? Over-weighters? Bread? Candy? Rich desserts? Nuts? You wish you didn't care for them? You can have your wish. Swear off for, say at least two months. Take fruits for dessert and cut your bread down to not over two slices a day, and less than that if you called me up and asked me for potatoes, spaghetti, etc., and don't touch candy. Candy is probably the worst habit-forming food of all.

Our pamphlet on reducing and gaining weight will give you details.

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a young girl, 17 years old, and engaged. Do you think that I am too young to marry? Mother things so. I love this boy and think that he loves me, although we quarrel quite a bit. I'm sure you can answer this question, and I'm going to take your advice. Would it be considered poor taste or judgment to be married in white organdie in October? USELESS."

Pretty young, dear. But your mother is the best judge of that. You would have to have her consent, you know. Some girls of 17 are much more mature than others, and seem to know their own minds. White organdie would be very pretty and appropriate.

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am 18 years old and have been married six months to a man four years my senior. He goes autoing with a young man the same age and insists on having a good time, but compels me to stay at home and obey him. Do you think I should obey him when he does as he pleases? Do you think he should go autoing and leaving me home? Does it look suspicious to you of another girl, or does he do it for pleasure?"

"BROKEN HEARTED."
Your husband likes to get out with the fellows, I presume. Broken Hearted, and is thoughtful about leaving you. Why don't you get a bunch of girls together when he does that and have a good time too? As to obeying him, if his mandates seem good to you, obey, especially if he asks you in a nice way. If they don't seem good to you, don't obey.

"LONELY LITTLE BROWN EYES."

It's a question in my mind, after reading your letter, whether you were really unable to go to the station or were too spunky to go because he could not come after you. Which was it? He probably thought the latter, and how do you think he knows you love him when you refused to marry him and wouldn't go to the station? He probably and very naturally thinks you don't like him at all. Why don't you write to him and tell him you were sick that day and that you want him to write. Then if he doesn't answer you'll know he has probably lost interest.

I don't know why he should treat me so unless it was because I would not go to the depot with him when he was here. He called me up and asked me to go to the station. # Central Beats Miamisburg 14 To 7 In League Tilt

WEAK ATTACK AT GOAL LINE CHECKS XENIA

Locals Perform Brilliantly In Mid-Field But Offense Crumbles In Striking Distance; Smart End Running Thrills Crowds.

By PHIL FRAME

ENCOUNTERING more opposition than bargained for, Xenia Central High School nearly met its equal in the downtrodden Miamisburg High eleven and only by seizing upon a "break" late in the fourth quarter eked out its first Miami Valley League football triumph when the guests weakened and gave Xenia an opportunity to hang up an unimpressive 14 to 7 victory Friday afternoon at Cox Memorial Athletic Field.

Xenia's performance did not measure up to previous standards and as a result the Blue and White football prestige was almost drenched by an inferior Miamisburg eleven which had already lost two straight league games. The Blue and White eleven found little difficulty making headway, piling up first downs in easy fashion, but nearly always lacking the punch to score. There was plenty of lost motion in Central's attack for at least five times the Burger goal was threatened during the contest without result. The final drive was missing and most of the gains were unproductive.

The contest was marked by alternate flashes of brilliant form and uninteresting play.

Both teams had more or less good chances to score in the opening quarter but did not make use of them. The visitors' opportunity came early when Adair fumbled the kickoff and Schoenberger recovered on the Xenia thirty. After Scurry skirled the opposite side of the line for fourteen more. In the next three plays Xenia lost three yards and a pass into the end zone which was grounded brought the attack to an unsuccessful termination.

Xenia's first touchdown came in the second quarter when a succession of line plays netted two first downs and brought the ball from midfield to Miamisburg's twenty-nine-yard line. Scurry then ran around right end behind perfect interference for a score. Scurry also booted a perfect place kick for the extra point.

A few minutes later the smart running colored halfback furnished the longest run of the day when he circled end for forty-six yards to the Miamisburg fifteen-yard line and with a clear field ahead for a touchdown stumbled or was tripped. His interference on this lengthy haul was perfect. Again the Central attack was halted by the rugged Burger defense and four plays gained one yard.

Xenia employed a forward passing attack to once more threaten the Burger goal line but the half ended before another touchdown could be made. Taking the ball in midfield, Bell shot a pass into the arms of Buell for a sixteen-yard gain. Sweeping made runs by Scurry and Bell added ten more yards in two plays. Scurry was thrown for a five-yard loss but Bell snatched a pass from Scurry to advance the ball fourteen yards to the enemy eleven-yard line as the sun cracked ended the half.

Xenia was slightly outplayed in the third quarter which found the local eleven on the defensive ground for all of the time. Near the end of the period a fifteen-yard penalty took the ball back to Xenia's one-yard line and Scurry was forced to kick from behind his own goal. He kicked thirty-five yards and Heiser knifed through center for six yards as the period ended.

On the first play in the fourth period, Captain Martz dropped back to hurl a pass, finding no receiver in sight ran around left end instead to the Xenia three-yard line before Scurry forced him out of bounds. On the second play Martz crashed over the line, Heiser caught the Xenia line napping and bucked over for the extra point, knotting the score.

Desperate for more points, Xenia was aided in registering its winning touchdown by a "break" of the game. After receiving the kickoff, a Miamisburg player was detected slugging and the penalty was half the distance to the goal line. In this case thirty yards to the visitors' thirty-five-yard line. Buell traveled around left end for thirteen yards, but this gain was nullified when Scurry was tackled for a ten-yard loss. Buell made three and then Gibeay, shifted to end, stood on the Burger eight-yard line and received a pass from Bell for twenty-four yards.

With four plays in which to cross the goal line, Xenia found it required the maximum number to shove the ball across. Buell pierced tackle for seven on the first play. Buell and Adair were stopped in their tracks but on the fourth down Buell plucked across. Scurry placed kicked the extra point.

His fighting spirit aroused, Xenia made one last effort to add to its total in the last few minutes of the contest but the Burgers, fighting like tigers, staved off further scoring. Scurry uncocked another neat bit of ball telling, circling end for a twenty-five-yard run but it was not allowed and a five-yard penalty was inflicted on Xenia instead.

Scurry heaved a pass to Bell for a gain of thirty-five yards placing the ball on the Burger nine-yard line. It was the longest pass of the afternoon. Xenia lost two yards on four plays but in the last few seconds Xenia recovered a Burger fumble and Bell slashed off tackle for an eight-yard run to the ten-yard line as the game ended without further scoring.

Statistics of the game show how decisively Xenia outplayed, outpassed and generally outplayed Miamisburg. Xenia backs surged over the line for thirteen first downs to six for the visitors. Central completed four out of nine passes for a total of eighty-nine yards, while the Burgers completed one pass in five attempts for a sixteen-yard gain.

Xenia backs gained 187 yards from scrimmage against an aggregate of 115 yards for the Burger eleven. Penalties deducted twenty-five yards from Xenia and forty from Miamisburg. Scurry was required to punt only six times and averaged much better distance than his opponent, Martz, who kicked eight times.

Xenia showed a more effective attack than usual but the ground gaining was for the most part confined to midfield. Although Xenia employed its whole catalogue of plays it has yet to develop a scoring weapon. Scurry, Buell and Bell proved good ground gainers and their tackling was also deadly. On the line Smittle, Gibeay and others played good defensive games. Adair also tackled and blocked well.

Dimeat, diminutive quarter-back, gained consistently for Miamisburg. Heiser bucked the line for frequent gains and Martz also gave a fine exhibition.

Xenia will meet its third league opponent of the season next Friday, playing Greenville at Greenville. Lineups and summary:

PUNTS AND PASSES

Coach "Pinky" Wilson's Central High footballers are furnishing the kind of gridiron entertainment that should draw better crowds to Cox Memorial Athletic Field for home games.

Dyed-in-the-wool fans know that there are frequently more thrills in the performance of a high school team than in the well-oiled and automatic gridiron machines that represent big schools. They will find at Cox field a little of every kind of football and after all, that's what makes for sideline interest.

One of Central's important scoring threats is the sweeping end run, which will probably always remain second only to the forward pass in inspiring thrills. Just as in life, the play that promises the biggest gain also offers the greatest hazard. The line-plunge is safely conservative, and rarely nets more than two yards. The off-tackle dash should achieve more but the danger of lost ground is great. The end run hazards still more for a greater gain while the pass practically risks all for a substantial progression of the ball.

Coach Wilson works his sweeping end runs behind a blanket of interference and, with the exception of a few forward passes, they offered the biggest scoring threat and the biggest thrill to fans at Friday's game with Miamisburg. This writer likes to see his favorite team run the ends well and therefore perhaps he is prejudiced in favor of the play. But we believe, nevertheless, that any fan will find Central furnishing enough thrill to compensate for an afternoon at the game. Central faltered Friday at critical times, as any high school team will, but they gave evidence of being well coached. And the offensive style should please any fan who likes a daring form of attack, well-masked behind formal deception.

Coach Johnny Nowald's Wilmington High team took an awful drubbing from Chillicothe High Thursday, losing a South Central Ohio League game 32 to 7. The score would have been much larger and funnier if Coach Young of Chillicothe had not pulled his punches by inserting substitutes. The Quaker's long domination on league gridirons, seems to have been brought to an end. Central High meets Wilmington later this season.

Antioch is basing its hopes this season on Bill Toomey, recently returned from a southern professional baseball league where he played under the wing of the St. Louis Cardinals. Although this season marks his first attempt to play football, the burly back has shown plenty of ability to smash the line together with a world of speed. Among other candidates for the team who have shown up favorably in practice are Hall, quarter-back; Sprague, Nicklason and Takanaka.

Antioch's probable starting lineup for the game as announced Saturday morning is as follows: Mock and Bankson, ends; Bostwick and Geiser, tackles; Welch and Fisher, guards; Brown, center; Nicklason and Early, half-backs; and McClain, fullback. The game was scheduled for 2:30 p. m.

GRID CAPTAINS

PETER PUND
—GEORGIA TECH

Peter Pund, center, is the captain of the Georgia School of Technology this fall. He is expected to be one of the outstanding stars of the south this season, and may lead the southerners to an even more successful season than they enjoyed last fall, when they reached their heights by beating the University of Georgia in the final game of the season.

WILMINGTON RULES FAVORITE IN GAME WITH ANTIOCH TEAM

Following two weeks of the most intensive practice, Coach C. E. Kennedy, of Antioch College, announced his Division "B" football squad in first-class condition for the opening game with Wilmington College at Yellow Springs Saturday afternoon.

Drills in fundamentals and stiff scrimmage practice featured the workouts this week, which closed with a signal practice Friday. Antioch sought revenge Saturday for an 18 to 0 defeat handed the Division "A" eleven by Wilmington in the opening game of the season. The following week Antioch upset Cedarville 31 to 6 and last week Wilmington swamped Cedarville 42 to 6. Wilmington ruled a pre-game favorite.

LANGS TACKLE SPRINGFIELD BULLDOG TEAM

The Lang Chevrolet football team went through a stiff signal drill at Cincinnati Ave. Park Thursday evening and all the players reported in good shape for Sunday's game with the Bulldogs at Springfield.

The locals were weakened when Lou McCoy, lineman and back, suffered a dislocated shoulder in last week's game against the Avondale Furies. McCoy will probably be out of the lineup for several weeks and his loss will be keenly felt.

The Lang outfit is going up against real opposition when it tackles the Bulldogs as the Springfield crew has lost but one game to date and that was at the hands of the T and P Cleaners a week ago. If the locals can defeat the Bulldogs they will even an old score and it will mark the first time that any local semi-pro club ever defeated the Clark County eleven.

The trip to Springfield will be made by auto and all players are requested to be at Lang Sales Room at 12 o'clock as the team will leave at that time. The game will be played at Ridgewood Field at Springfield and will get under way at 2:30 o'clock.

Personalities IN SPORT

MIKE MCTIGUE
Michael Francis McTigue, former world's lightweight champion, was born in County Clare, Ireland, Nov. 26, 1892.

Beginning his pro career in 1915, McTigue battled his way to a bout with Battling Siki, the light-heavyweight champion, in Ireland on Saint Patrick's Day in 1923—and, of course, Irish Mike won from the Senegalese.

Paul Berlenbach beat him in 1925 and took away his title. However, when Jack Delaney, then champion, gave up the light heavy title, in 1927, it was awarded to McTigue, who lost it the same year to Tommy Loughran, the present champ.

McTigue's record stands at 105 wins, 10 losses and 10 draws. He is now training at the Loughran camp in Chicago.

The Little Yellow House

By BEATRICE BURTON -- RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSN. © 1928

READ THIS FIRST:
Over the poverty and discontent in the little yellow house broods a mother's love, which transmutes the dingy home to a palace of love and beauty. Emmy, the only daughter, is disappointed with her surroundings, envious of her wealthy relatives, eager to try her wings. She goes to work at her first job. And there a new man, very different from quiet, hard-working Robb, who loves her, but who represents to her only a moneyless, boring future. She decides to get away from dingy Flower street and live her own life in a little apartment of her own, where she can entertain as she likes.

So that Emmy will not leave, Mrs. Milburn decides to give up the little yellow house, and they can live at Grandmother Pentland's big mansion, where things will be finer. Mrs. Milburn did not tell the children that in order to get the chance she had promised to do about all the house work, the servants at the big house having left.

Emmy takes dictation from Wells, and when the letters are finished he tells her he will walk down to the corner with her.

It is Saturday afternoon, and Emmy goes for a ride in the country in Wells' smart sport roaster. (Now Go On With The Story.)

CHAPTER XXXV
The dining room was dark and low-ceilinged, and a wood fire crackled in the grate near the little yellow house, and on shelves table where they were pewter, and Indian Tree china plates, and the windows were hung with printed linen curtains of old rose and powder-blue and lavender. Outside bright banners of sunset flamed along the sky above Lake Erie.

"I'm having a good time—I wonder if you know it," Harbison said, as they sat waiting for the chicken and waffles that he had ordered. Emmy had not known it. She had been afraid he was bored all the afternoon as she chattered to him about a thousand things: music that she loved and moving pictures and Lucile Ingham and the beauty of the drive along the cliffs above the lake. He had barely answered her.

But now in the warm shadowy room that they had all to themselves, he leaned forward, arms on the table, and began to talk to her eagerly as if he were saying things that he had been waiting to say for a long time.

"It means a great deal to me to be here with you this afternoon," he said, and then he called her by her first name for the first time. "Emmy."

Emmy looked quickly away from him. She could feel herself growing red, and she felt as if she were shaking from head to foot so that he could see her tremble. She began to notice the most absurd details of the room—the way the red sunset was reflected in all the water bottles on the tables, the one-eyed parrots in the linen curtains, the tiny scratch on the leg of the table next to theirs.

"I suppose you know I like you tremendously," Harbison's deep, quiet voice was saying now, and it seemed to come to her from a long way off. "I think I must be in love with you," it ran on. "But whatever it is, it's been coming on since that first Saturday when I walked into the office and saw you sitting at your desk."

The waitress brought in the flowered-china bowls of chicken noodle soup and a glass dish of stuffed olives and radishes. She sat them before the silent pair at the table and tiptoed out into the pantry once more. There she watched them from the crack in the swinging door.

"Are you hungry?" Harbison asked, and without meeting his eyes Emmy shook her head. Her appetite had deserted her the last few minutes.

"Then let's get out," Harbison took a cigarette from a gold and platinum case and lit it up.

He laid a five-dollar bill on the table, and he and Emmy went out into the pale-blue dusk, to the great disappointment of the romantic waitress.

They rode a long way in silence. Emmy, in her corner of the seat, never took her eyes from Harbison's clear-cut profile. Seen thus, he was much better looking than he was full face. His eyes were so cold a blue, and he had a way of narrowing them Emmy never had liked somehow—a way that at times made her think of Uncle Bill Parke's eyes.

"He's in love with me," she kept thinking, and the thought made her breath come thick and fast in her throat. It was a disturbing thought—that this man for whom she worked had been in love with her ever since she had been working for him. This man, with his paper mills and his easy manner that only a background of wealth can give, with his foreign car and his platinum-and-gold cigarette case.

The thought flashed into Emmy's mind that the wife of a man like Wells Harbison could meet a man like Jim Baldwin on more than an equal footing. She could hold her head up anywhere in the world. She could have almost anything that her heart desired or her pride dictated!

But, after all, he had said only: "I think I must be in love with you." He hadn't been quite sure of himself, and there was something baffling in his silence now.

They were half way home when he put out his gloved hand and drew Emmy's hand under it to the rim of the steering wheel. "We'll talk about this again," he said. "Not tonight. There are some things I've got to think out, Emmy."

At half-past eight they turned into Prospect Street, and Emmy felt a glow of satisfaction as they slid to a stop before Grandmother Pentland's red brick house.

"What if I'd have to drive into Flower Street with him?" she said to herself with a shudder, thinking of the night when Jim Baldwin had taken her home to the little yellow house.

"Do you live here? In this house?" Astonishment sounded in Harbison's voice as he looked up at the dwelling place of his twenty-two-dollar-a-week stenographer who could not afford an Augustine hat.

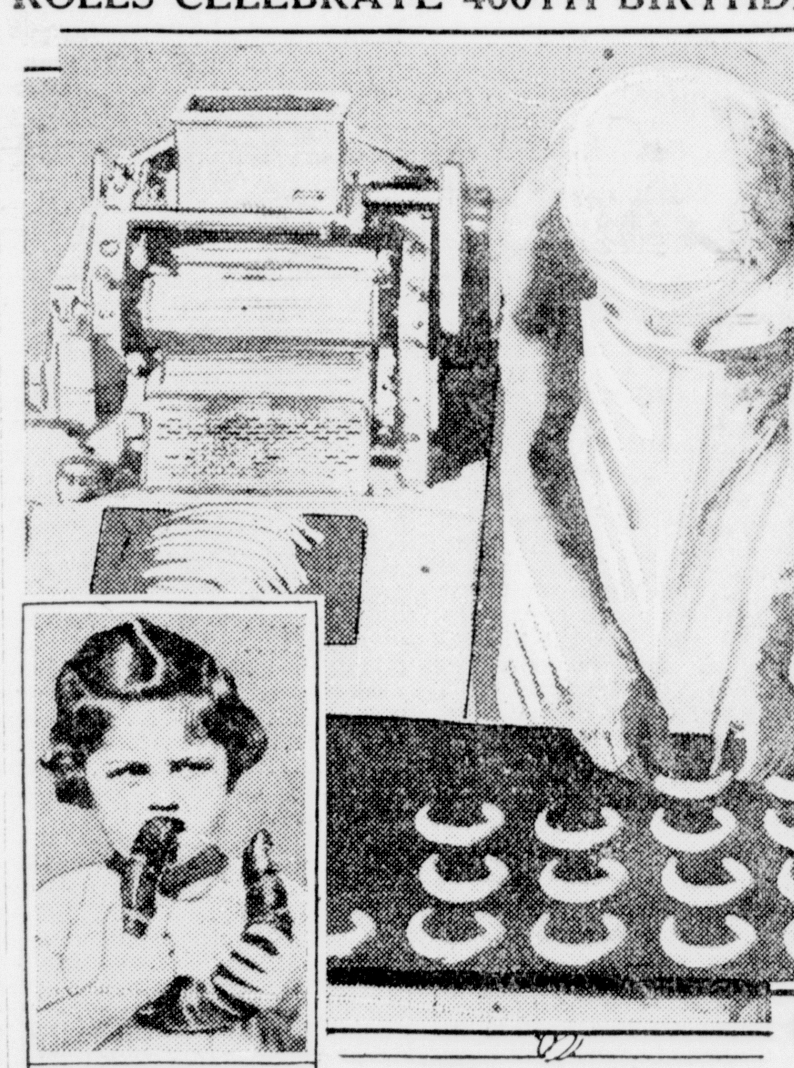

"It's my grandmother's house," Emmy said, simply, as she stepped out of the car. "We live with her. Thanks for this afternoon—it's been lovely. Good night."

"Good night," Harbison held her hand. For a second she thought he was going to say something more to her. Then suddenly he let her go and started his car. "Good night," he said again, and drove away.

And that was how things began between them.

ROLLS CELEBRATE 400TH BIRTHDAY

Viennese poppy seed roll maker at work; inset, Vienna tot enjoying one of the rolls.

VIENNA, AUSTRIA, Oct. 27.—A little frolic-fest for its celebrating its 400th birthday here these days.

The roll—it's the famous poppy seed variety—was originated in Vienna back in 1528 as the result of a battle between Turks and the citizens of Vienna.

The Turks had completely surrounded the town, and it began to look as though it wouldn't be long before the good burghers of Vienna either became first-rate Moslems or dead Viennese.

But the Turks made one mistake. In digging their tunnel they happened to burrow right beneath a bakery. The bakers heard them and gave the alarm. The upshot was that the Viennese did the surprising, and the Turks went scampering back to Turkey.

In commemoration of the event, bakers designed a little roll in the shape of a crescent—which was the emblem of the Turks. The new roll, probably because of its significance, made a big hit, and has been popular ever since.

VIENNA, AUSTRIA, Oct. 27.—A little (reckless) faced roll is celebrating its 400th birthday here these days.

The roll—it's the famous poppy seed variety—was originated in Vienna back in 1528 as the result of a battle between Turks and the citizens of Vienna.

The Theater

By GEORGE H. BEALE

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 27.—After a series of conferences carrying over a three-month period, Gloria Swanson and Eric Von Stroheim have announced they are "about to begin" work on "Queen Kelly."

The conferences to date appear to have resulted in little except that this starring vehicle for Miss Swanson will have sound effects and that Walter Byron, the young English actor, will be the leading man.

In the speed rate to date, Von Stroheim should be ready to grab his megaphone in about six months and start calling directions to Miss Swanson.

Meantime Hollywood will hold its breath and wait for results from this combination. Something should happen since Von Stroheim is known as the screen colony's greatest celluloid spendthrift and Miss Swanson never was niggardly about the number of feet of film used for her closeups.

so powerful message to humanity which will be shown at the Orpheum Theater Sunday, October 28.

Directed by Emory Johnson, the picture is being acclaimed the work of genius. Its smashing story of everyday life is brought to the screen with a dramatic sympathy that is regarded as one of the fine things of the cinema world.

"The Fourth Commandment," hailed as an epic of mother love, brings Belle Bennett, star of "Stella Dallas" to the screen in another great mother role. Supporting this star are such well known screen players as Mary Carr, Robert Agnew, June Marlowe, Henry Victor, Kathleen Myers and the screen's newest child "find," little Wendell Phillips Franklin.

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 27.—After a series of conferences carrying over a three-month period, Gloria Swanson and Eric Von Stroheim have announced they are "about to begin" work on "Queen Kelly."

The conferences to date appear to have resulted in little except that this starring vehicle for Miss Swanson will have sound effects and that Walter Byron, the young English actor, will be the leading man.

On the speed rate to date, Von Stroheim should be ready to grab his megaphone in about six months and start calling directions to Miss Swanson.

Meantime Hollywood will hold its breath and wait for results from this combination. Something should happen since Von Stroheim is known as the screen colony's greatest celluloid spendthrift and Miss Swanson never was niggardly about the number of feet of film used for her closeups.

"ONE WAY TO LOVE"

ALL June I bound the rose in sheaves.
Now, rose by rose, I strip the leaves
And strew them where Pauline may pass.
She will not turn aside? Alas!
Let them lie. Suppose they die?
The chance was they might take her eye.

How many a month I strove to suit
These stubborn fingers to the lute!
Today I venture all I know.
She will not hear my music? So!

Break the string; fold music's wing:
Suppose Pauline had bade me sing!

My whole life long I learned to love.
This hour my utmost art I prove
And speak my passion—heaven or hell?

She will not give me heaven?
'Tis well!
Lose who may—I still can say,
Those who win heaven, blest are they!

money to buy Liberty bonds but the farm board could not sell the bonds at par. The board then asked congress and the president to buy $50,000,000 worth of their bonds which they did. Smith says this legislation is of no importance," Sen. Curtis declared.

"The Republicans took possession of the government on March 4, 1921, at a time when the Liberty bonds were selling far below par. Six months after being in power, every bond was selling at par. Agriculture was harder hit as a result of the war because of the unfortunate attitude of the Democratic party."

Before closing, Sen. Curtis described Herbert Hoover as "A man whose heart beats for children and women; a man who gave relief to the devastated nations of Europe; a man who volunteered to turn his office over to subordinates to bring relief when the Mississippi flood wrought havoc; and a man who knows more about the conditions of the world than any other man in the country."

Senator Curtis was introduced to his audience by Senator Simeon D. Fess who spoke briefly, preceding the Curtis talk. Senator Fess is accompanying Sen. Curtis on his tour of Ohio.

Myers Y. Cooper, gubernatorial candidate, was next introduced by Congressman Charles Brand of Urbana, chairman of the meeting.

Cooper, in opening, advocated the election of Hoover for president and said that he was proud of the fact that the Republican party could present to the State of Ohio and this great nation a ballot which entirely pleased the people. He also lauded Fess and predicted a victory for him over his opponent.

"In Ohio the farmer and small home owner are burdened by over-taxation. This six-tenths of a mill levy which drains $21,000,000 each year from the pockets of these people is an effort to make up a deficit of $13,250,000."

"I promise to leave the levy in the pockets of the farmers and home-owners, and I don't intend to make promises I cannot keep for I expect to be called upon to fulfill these pledges," Cooper said.

"The good roads program in Ohio is a Republican program. Today there are about 11,000 miles of main market roads under the direction of the Public Highways Department; 24,000 miles under care of county commissioners, and 54,000 miles under township trustees."

"In insist that every mile of paving shall be let by competitive bidding. By this method the roads will be completed quicker and there will be double engineering service all the way," Cooper declared. "I want to know what a mile of road will cost before I let the contract."

"We have had a negative program in Ohio. With a Republican governor working with a Republican legislature, we will bring about reforms and benefits to the people of Ohio at a reduced cost of government," Cooper stated.

In commenting on the gasoline tax, Cooper told that Martin L. Davey, Democratic candidate for governor, in a speech in Cincinnati, condemned the gas tax in the strongest manner.

"If the gas tax were repealed, it would repeal $21,000,000 to be used for road repair and would mean that this state would be $5,000,000 short on this program. It is just another method whereby the farmers and home-owners can be assessed to make up the $21,000,000."

"Seven days following Davey's talk in Cincinnati, he changed his mind on the gas tax. If he can change his mind in seven days, he can change it again in seven days after Nov. 6. But, it won't make any difference for he won't be the next governor of Ohio," Cooper asserted.

The meeting was called to order by Sherman Dexton of Urbana, member of the Republican state central committee. Dr. W. R. McChesney, president of Cedarville College, gave the invocation.

Congressman Charles Brand, also of Urbana, was chairman of the meeting.

Judge Frank W. Geiger of Springfield spoke briefly and concluded, by saying, "This is a moral crusade, and the women of this country are going to give Al Smith a dry cleaning with a Hoover sweep."

Mrs. Myers Y. Cooper was called to the front of the platform and introduced to the audience.

Entertainment was furnished by the Urbana Glee Club, the Clinton County Band of Blanchester, and the Cooper Drum Corps.

Luncheon was served on the grounds at noon and during the

Hoover Brings to National Problems a Trained, Scientific Mind

The time has come when a man of scientific training in the Presidency is needed. If we are to maintain our high standards of living, we must have scientific guidance in the proper use and conservation of our material wealth. Since we now manufacture many things for which raw materials must be imported, we need a national leader who knows the world's markets and can defend our interests when foreign producers try to fix prices against us. We need a man, who, in such emergencies, can help us to break a foreign monopoly by producing the thing needed at

A Real Bottle of Health! THAT'S WHAT YOU GET IN OUR SPECIAL JERSEY MILK

The difference in richness and food value between it and ordinary milk makes it worth far more than the one penny per pint in cost, and when it comes to the pleasure in using—say—just think of rich yellow Jersey milk and that wonderful golden Jersey cream and you'll say it's foolish not to have it on your table when it costs so little.
